

Key Points

Contrast between the behaviour of child

When the child was
with his parents

When the child was
separated from his parents

Happy and enjoying

Crying eyes full of tears

Free Spirit

Panic-stricken

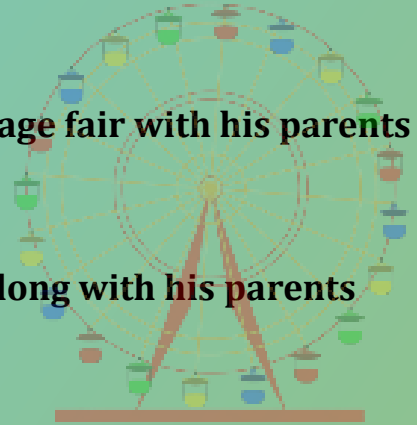

Fearless

Wanted to be with his parents

Wanted many things

All things no longer
appealed to him

- This story is about a small boy who goes to the village fair with his parents but somehow gets lost in the fair.
- A little boy, filled with liveliness and enthusiasm along with his parents started going to a fair.
- In the midway he got attracted towards a toy in the toy shop and he demands for it. In return he receives a denial after he looks into the red eyes of his father.
- They started walking towards a mustard field where he got attracted towards a group of dragonflies, which were intersecting the ways of butterflies that were trying to suck the nectar from the flowers.
- The child was further attracted towards a number of things including the insects that were coming out of the soil, the flower petals showered upon him when he entered the shade.
- Finally, they reached the fair where the child saw the shops of sweetmeat seller, flower seller, balloon seller, snake charmer. He suppressed his desires to eat the Burfi, to buy a Gulmohur garland and the colourful balloons, and listening to the music played by the snake charmer.
- Finally, he reached near the roundabout and placed a demand in front of his parents to take a ride on the roundabout when he realised that his parents were nowhere to be seen.
- Crying utterly, he searched for his parents everywhere but couldn't find them. He went to a temple where he was almost crushed under the legs of people just when a gentleman picked him up and asked about his parents. Hearing this the child started crying.
- In order to calm down the child, the man took him to the shops of sweetmeat seller, flower seller, balloon seller, snake charmer and to the roundabout too. Every time, the child denied saying that he needed his parents.

